Sarah Janssen is the senior editor of The World Almanac® and Book of Facts. She lives in Brooklyn, NY.

This book has just about anything you want to know about the past year, plus a lot of other interesting facts from years past, such as the daily use of cigarettes by 8th, 10th, and 11th graders from 1995-2015. Everything is well indexed. It is fascinating reading even if you are not looking for anything in particular, and one can surprise people with interesting facts you have and liven up a conversation!

It's crammed full of information, which I expected because I've bought previous editions. The print is so darn tiny though. I guess that's necessary in order to keep it to one volume. The tiny print makes it difficult to read. If you are a political junkie, it has county-by-county results for the 2016 election. I like having a lot of information on a variety of topics at my fingertips.

Even as easy as google is, I love this book! Get the new volume every year and give the older version to someone who was proved wrong by its contents. Even a great bathroom reader.

Tiny tiny print! Good content if you can read it. Thought they would have corrected this problem from last year. Order a magnifying glass if you get this.

The World Almanac is a great source of information for my mom, who does not use a computer.

She especially enjoys looking up facts about her favorite celebrities. We update the Almanac every couple of years for her at Christmas.

If you have only one reference, it should be this one. History, geography, current events, sports, ...you name and it is here in a well organized and easy to use format. Did I mention that if I were stranded on an uninhabited isle... Buy it.

I get one for my husband every year and he loves having it handy.

The reference to research all the bias BS being reported in the media. No politics, just solid facts that will frequently surprise you. Don't let others "Tell You What To Think", Check the FACTS with World Almanac Book Of Facts.Five Stars
